STRATEGY WITH SOUL

STAGE · YOU'RE READY TO START YOUR VENTURE

Build with method

Turn your idea into a real project

You want to build something of your own. That takes as much strategy as heart — and here we work on both.

YOUR LIFE IS A PROJECT TOO

An idea isn't a project (yet)

Starting a venture isn't jumping without a net, nor waiting until it's "perfect." It's turning an idea into a project with method: scope, a first milestone, and a realistic plan. Here all four steps of my method come together.

Your idea in one sentence

WHO you help and HOW. If it doesn't fit in one sentence, it's still fuzzy.

Define the minimum scope

What's the smallest version that already delivers value? Start there, not with the empire.

Validate before investing

Talk to 5 real people from your audience. Listen before you spend.

Set a first milestone with a date

"In 4 weeks I'll have X." Without a date, it's a dream, not a plan.

Protect your stability

Be realistic about what's in and what's not yet. Build without losing your footing.

EXERCISE

Your project on one page

Your venture begins when you write it down. Fill in your first page.

I help... to achieve...

Your idea in one sentence...

My minimum version is...

The smallest thing that already adds value...

I'll validate by talking to...

5 people from your audience...

My first milestone and its date

What you'll have and by when...

What I'm NOT doing yet: _____ (protecting your stability is strategy too).

You don't need it all. You need to start with method. That's your next step.
